Ex-Soldier Will Be Given Own Choice of Occupation Under Federal Board Plan

A thorough course of training for new occupation, made necessary by the nature of his wounds, or a course en-abling him to take up his old occupation better qualified for it than when he left it to join the colors, is the Government's plan for every disabled soldier.

The disabled man himself, however, must determine whether or not he wishes to accept the Government's offer. That offer includes the paying of all his personal expenses while he is taking his training course, together with the continuance of payment to his dependents of the same allowances they received while he was in active service.

The plan also provides that, at the

The plan also provides that, at the conclusion of his training, he will be placed in a good job, and that while he is engaged in mastering it his interests be looked after by the Government under the jurisdiction of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

The acceptance of this aid in learning a new trade, or tearning to follow the old one more successfully, in no way affects the War Risk Insurance to which the disabled man is entitled. The minute a man is curred and all filted out to take up his work, the payment of his insurance compensation will begin. The Federal Board will follow up his work to see that he gets a square deal, and that he makes good.

To Treat Man as Civilian

To Treat Man as Civilian

To Treat Man as Civillan

In cases where a man fails to do his work efficiently, even after training, he may go back to the Federal Board for more preparation; or, if it is deemed advisable, he may be trained for an entirely new occupation. In dealing with the disabled man, the Board—which is a civilian institution—will treat him throughout as a civilian, not as a soddier. The offer of aid, moreover, applies without regard as to how or where a man was disabled, whether in the United States or Europe. Even though a man is physically fit to return to his former occupation—for example, a legless man returning to a desk job—he may, if he desires, take a free course of training the same as any other disabled man.

The training to be offered will not be of training the same as any other dis-abled man.

The training to be offered will not be restricted to any specific vocations, but will embrace any branches of agricul-ture, commerce, industry, or the so-called professions. It will thus be pos-sible for the lawyer as well as the day-laborer to fit himself to do better work in future, regardless of his disability.

Cloth Patches That Served for Identification in Fight Now Proudly Preserved

Following are the combat records of 15 divisions of the A.E.F., together with drawing and description of the insignia a drawing and description of the insignia of each.

Distinctive insignia is now worn on the left shoulder by all members of combat divisions and by eorps and army troops. During combat, the insignia assisted in identifying men of units which became mixed up, and often assisted in reforming them. It has been a factor in developing divisional spirit, and it also has its use painted on whites and other divisional, corps or army property.

There is an interesting story behind the adoption of almost every design. State traditions, early military achievements, symbolical beasts, all have furnished inspiration for the insignia.

The selecton histories of front line activity and captures are from official A.F.F. records.

Other drawings and histories will be printed in later issues. The accounts of units which do not appear in numerical over the records.
